BRICKELL — Brickell City Centre's splashy Italian food hall, La Centrale, is changing owners, according to The Miami Herald, when come December 14 it will transform into Luna Park, another Italian food hall. While the first floor casual eateries that offer pizza, deli fare, and charcuterie options will get a rebrand, the third floor wine bar and cooking school will be transformed into a restaurant by Italian chef Nino di Costanzo who's restaurant Dani Maison in Italy boasts two Michelin stars. The second floor restaurants will also rebrand but remain serving similar cuisine with a steakhouse, seafood, and vegan sit down restaurants available. As one may remember, Brickell City Centre has not one but two Italian-themed food halls in the mall (something that makes many people scratch their heads) with Casa Tua Cucina located just around the corner from La Centrale.
